Position Responsibility Statement

Geoffrey Sauer

Geoffrey Sauer is expected to sustain a program of research that leads to publication in refereed books and journals and presentations at professional conferences. His normal teaching load is five courses each year, but during the first three years of his probationary period he receives an automatic research assignment, which makes his teaching load four courses each year for this period. His primary teaching responsibilities include multimedia and other technology-related courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, as well as other courses in rhetoric and technical communication. During his probationary period, he is expected to serve on a departmental standing committee as well as participate in the Rhetoric and Professional Communication Area Committee; after the year of his tenure review, he is encouraged also to serve on college and university committees.
